Joy Riding is Killing Chances M'Graw's Men Have to Win Flag.

By Frank G. Menke.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Joy riding s killing the 1916 pennant chances

John McGraw and some of the New York fans seem to be mystified because the Giants are sluggers on the road-and cannot hit at home. For a time, the signs on the center ! excuse was shattered by other clubs two Wileys played in some of the cate. which came here and proceeded to blow themselves to slugfests.

. The whole trouble with the Giants is that they have automobilitis. Practically every member of the club has a gasoline chariot. When he is home he spends his evenings chugging around at a rate of speed as great-or greater-than the law allows. He goes for jaunts far into the night and comes home with his eyes inflamed by the wind friction. The next day his vision is not as clear as Gallia and Henry; Bush, Nabors is should be normally; there is a silght blur. His eye batting judgment is punk and he cannot connect. On the road, the Giants are a different crew altogether. They leave their bus at home and don't spend half the night racing around. They get plenty of sleep and they don't do anything that irritates their eyes. As a result, they jump into the game each afternoon with a clear eyeand how they do lam that baseball The Giants, during their urst stay at home this season, could not hit with any consistency. Meanwhile, they were flitting hither and thither. o' nights in their cars. Then they went on the road minus their autos -and they hit like fiends. They came back, resumed their automobling-and again they have slumped in a clubbing way. The condition that exists this year is the same as existed before. The

Giants during the past three seasons have not been able to do any noticeable batting at home. All their swatting has been done on the road, where joy rides have been few and Monsieur Benjamin Kauff was quite a swatsman in 1914. That was before he suffered from automobilities hit-killing germs began to infest his ystem and Kauff didn't hit with as much success as in former years. This season, Kauff, who has a new racing car, is hitting around .275.
